Project and directing by Carlo Quartucci, music by Salvatore Sciarrino, produced by La Zattera di Babele.

Other performances: Rome, Teatro Valle, 21-30 December 1989.

“Looking at a scene doesn’t necessarily mean observing it.

No doubt we continually find ourselves observing something or other: a face, the sky, an object, even silence. However looking at a scene means seeing it with one’s eyes shut, forgetting it – and thus being observed by it – which is what happens to all those who find themselves in a normal state (for example at the theatre, or in a museum) rather than in an accidental state (in life, for example).

A scene (this one here, for instance) hastens materials and figures, one atop the other, which are deposited – without some immediate reason, but rather for their own, age-old necessity – on the uncertain horizon of the representation, sighted before being formed or after being formed as a work.¹ It is the truth of the theatre (of the work of art): images that appear – the ‘arsenal of apparitions’ as Pirandello himself once said – ‘take on a life of their own’, statues in the garden of visions, inanimate mechanisms in a weightless universe” (G. Paolini, “Guardare una scena...”, 1989, revised version of the English translation published in L. Cherubini, “Giulio Paolini / Spettacoli teatrali”, in Sipario. Balla, De Chirico, Savinio, Picasso, Paolini, Cucchi, exhibition catalogue, Rivoli, Castello di Rivoli Museo d’Arte Contemporanea [Milan: Edizioni Charta, 1997], p. 265).

¹These remains, or signs, evoke the traces of some of my works (fifteen, the same as the number of characters that inhabit the stage): Tertium non datur, Dal "Trionfo della rappresentazione" (cerimoniale: l'artista è assente), Éclat, Scene di conversazione, Signore e signori..., L'autore? Un attore!, Théâtre de l'Odéon, Osservatorio, Il tempio della Sibilla, Intervallo, Abat-jour, Senza titolo (senza figura), Les instruments de la passion, Künstler-Theater, Sipario.
